POETRY.

Its words
Are few, but deep and solemn, and they break Fresh from the fount of feeling.—Perceval.

LAMENT OF THE SELF-EXILED.

The following was written by one who had drank deeply from the cup of prosperity—and whose name for a long time was honored among the great and good. Well fitted by education and talents to move in the highest circles of society, long days of happiness and prosperity seemed before him; but by a sudden change of fortune he was compelled to leave his family and flee from his country.

Oh! that it were an idle dream,
That vexed my sleep in midnight hour,
And sent its dark and fitful gleam Across the heart with fearful power!
I then again should happy be,
And wake my former joys to see.

Oh! that it were a transient cloud, How dark and fierce soe'er its form, That poured its flood, and thundered loud In all the terrors of the storm!
I then could list its dying voice,
And soon in brighter skies rejoice.

Alas! alas! this dream of life Is all a sad reality;
A storm of vengeance and of strife, Which closes with vitality.
I must till death abide its spell; Till death be toss'd upon its swell.

Where are those days of joy and mirth, Those hours from care and sorrow free, Which once, around my father's hearth, Were happy days and hours to me?
They're passed away like rainbow dyes, While I am left 'neath darkened skies.

Those recent scenes where pleasure dwelt,
And friends and loved companions came,
And at the social altar knelt In fervent prayer to God's great name—These too are numbered with the past, And scattered by this sweeping blast.

My country, children, friends and home, Those links of life forever dear, How can I flee, and from them roam Where all is cold, where all is drear!
'Tis death—'tis suicide indeed!
This wounded heart must ever bleed.

And can I not escape such woe?
Is there no mighty helper nigh, Where I may to his footstool go,
And humbly pour my suppliant cry?
My God, be thou my guide and stay, For thou canst turn my night to day.

CHOICE READING.

"If you enlighten the people, do not forget that this is but half the work. Let them be made virtuous and religious, or you leave them more exposed to danger than they were before."

CHRISTIAN CHARITY.

Christian charity is universal benevolence, obeying the injunction, 'love thy neighbor as thyself,' and being always in readiness, without grudging, to bestow their goods to feed the poor, as their Heavenly Father in his bountiful goodness hath given unto them all things necessary for life and godliness.

As faithful stewards of the manifold grace of God, it is the duty of all Christians to appropriate the means which he has placed in their hands, to the furtherance of his cause, and the relief of his needy followers, not burying the Lord's money as slothful servants, nor laying up treasures on earth, where moth and dust doth corrupt, and thieves break through and steal. The word of charity is also employed in the sense of love. The Apostle Paul, writing to the church of Corinth uses it in this—he says:
'Though I speak with the tongues of men, and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling symbol. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have no charity, it profiteth me nothing.— Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth.'— And in concluding the chapter, he says:—
'And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity.'

"GOD IS LOVE."

How much does the beloved apostle comprehend in this short sentence, God is love!
How simple in words, yet how sublime in idea! It were not enough to say that the Infinite, incomprehensible Jehovah is lovely, but He is love!

And what follows from this great truth in Theology? Every thing which is life-inspiring in Christianity. If 'God is love,' then it is always to be a prominent characteristic in the children of God. He that dwelleth in God, dwells in love. Men are Godlike when they abound in love. In just so far as Christians are of God, they are filled with love; they love one another and all men. In just so far as they hate one another, they are not of God, in this they are not the children nor imitators of Him who is love.

Love is the main-spring of all truly Christian effort. Behold their enemies must confess, how these Christians love one another, when churches and denominations are so in God as to dwell in love. He that loveth is begotten of God; he that loveth not, is not born of God, for God is love. My brethren, let us love, not in word only, but in deed, and in truth.—Morning Star.

HOPE OF THE CHRISTIANS.

Our daily observation and experience proves to us, that hope springs continually within the breast of man. If he undertakes a scheme, and fails of accomplishing it to his mind, hope will nerve him up to the undertaking of another, and so on to the end of life. It is right that it should be so. Were it not for this, life would be insupportable. But there are times, when the delusive hopes of this world cannot give peace to the soul—when sorrow, trouble and affliction overtake us—when health, fortune and friends are gone,—how dreary, how inconsolable, how sad our lot, did not the hope of the gospel incite us to look forward to fairer prospects, and did not one bright spot appear through sorrow's clouds, which tells us all is not darkness—that light may yet shine upon us; and while we view this bright spot, our drooping spirits are revived, and a hope of better, brighter prospects cheers our hearts, and gives us life within. Misfortune's storms may rage, and sorrow's waves dash; trials and troubles, with a foaming fury, rush in on every side, and even death's dark waters be full in view; yet if we ride in the bark of christian hope, we need not fear,— 'twill bear us safe through life's tempestuous seas—outside the dark waters of death, and conduct us to the haven of eternal rest, where peace like a river, will tor-ever flow to the soul.

FAMILY PRAYER.

In binding a family together in peace and love, there is no human influence like that of domestic prayer. Uniting them in a common object, it unites their sympathies and desires. Raising their hearts to heaven, it brings them all together in the presence of God. The family altar is an asylum to which they repair from the cares and toils of life; reminding them of the rest reserved in heaven, it unites them in effects of faith and obedience for its attainment. Earth has no holier spot than a house thus sanctified by prayer—where the voice of supplication and thanksgiving consecrates every day; where the word of God is devoutly read, and young and old unite to show forth all His praise. It may be humble, but it is holy. Poverty may be there, and sorrow—but its inmates are rich in faith, and joyous in the Holy Ghost.— Sickness may enter it, but it comes like an angel of peace and mercy.
